1953 Was Good Year For Antioch Business; Village Much Improved

Disasters and Tragedies to Be Overcome by New Outlook for 1954

While the Antioch area will receive the new year with much grace and welcome, the year of 1953 will be remembered for the most part as a year of disasters.

Antioch business men count it a successful year and most ledgers will show a good volume of business if not as much profit.

Dean Williams of Williams Department store said the volume of business this year was every bit as big as last year which was a banner

A hunting accident on Christmas Day resulted in the loss of an eye to Raymond Edwards, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Edwards of Grass Lake.

The youth, an eighth grade pupil at the Grass Lake school, was out rabbit hunting with a companion, Harvey Strametz, 16, Antioch Township High School sophomore, following a family dinner at the home of his brother, Robert Edwards.

The two boys were near the Robert Hart farm, it was said, when they saw a rabbit and both fired at it.

Raymond started to pick up the dead rabbit and Strametz was preparing to load his shot gun, a .410, when it accidentally went off. Ten of the pellets struck Edwards in the head, two of them in the left eye.

Strametz rushed to the Hart residence for aid and Mr. Hart took the boy to his parents, and they to an Antioch physician. From the doctor's office he was taken by the Antioch Rescue Squad to Victory Memorial hospital in Waukegan where a specialist on Monday removed the destroyed eye and the endangering pellets.

It is expected that Raymond will be brought home today, and he soon will be able to receive the visits of his friends.

Raymond is the youngest of the four Edwards children. An older brother, Sgt. Maurice L. Edwards, is in the air force intelligence service in Germany.

Two candidates were voted into the chapter at the Dec. 17 meeting and will be initiated at the Chapter Night meeting Jan. 7.

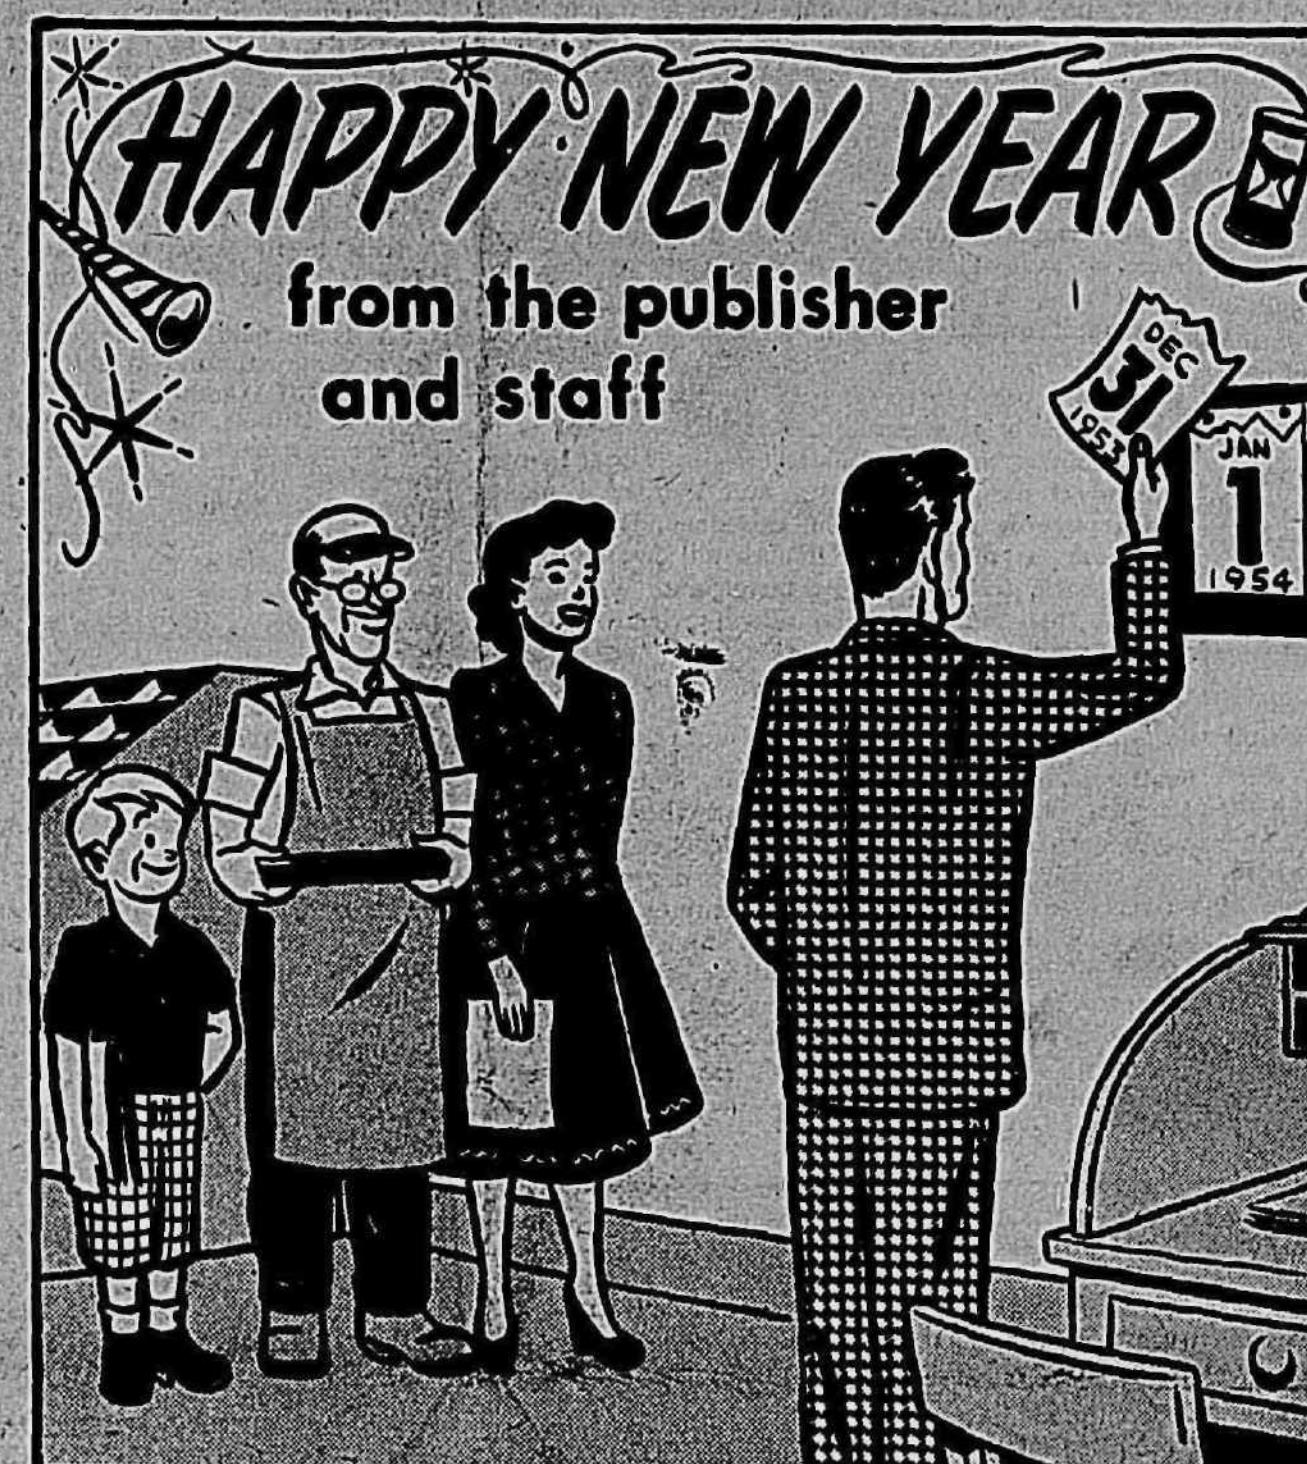

Birthday gifts were received from their secret pals by Annette Steiner, May Palmer, Mildred Strohner, Betty Heath, Eleanor Richards, Dorothy Holt, Ann Holm, Gerrelde Jung, Erna Tott, and Rose Mary Eckert.

A Christmas gift exchange was held, carols sung, and a luncheon served by Evelyn Burnette and her committee.

Members finished wrapping Christmas gifts for the Moose Children's party on Dec. 20.

Robert E. Coddington, Hardware Dealer Ends Life Christmas Day

Local Business Man, Believed Depressed, Fires Gun Into Temple

Antioch was shocked by the death Christmas Day of Robert E. Coddington, 49, of 735 Main st., well known hardware dealer.

He was found dead on the bedroom floor of his home with a bullet wound in his head at 2:30 p. m. by his wife. Sheriff's police found a gun in the open top drawer of a bureau in front of which he fell.

Mrs. Coddington told deputies and Coroner Robert Babcox she was in the kitchen and had not heard the shot.

Warren Polley Officer Of Business Teachers

Warren Polley is expected home this evening from St. Louis, where he attended the 56th yearly convention of the National Business Teachers Association at the Jefferson Hotel starting Monday.

Polley, business teacher at Antioch Township High School, served as vice-chairman of the Secondary Schools Department and was being proposed as chairman for the coming year.

The theme of the convention was "How's Your Professional Development."

A thousand teachers cut short their holiday vacation to attend the convention at their own expense. Hugh T. Barnes of the Barnes School of Commerce, Denver, Colo., was president of the national organization.

Special Board Meeting To Act on Taking Over Crown Streets, Mains

Leo Fox Home Winner Of Moose Christmas Decoration Contest

A special meeting of the village board has been called for 1:30 p. m. Saturday to act on the proposals of the Crown Realty Company that the village take over the roads and water system of its new subdivision.

Joe Horwitz, manager of the new subdivision said that the roads and water system have been completed and approved by the village engineer and that the maintenance bond of the contractors on the job should be made in favor of the village.

The bond extends a year, according to Village Atty. Edward C. Jacobs who recommended that the meeting be called on the request of Horwitz.

Mayor James McMillen said that it was advisable to handle the matter before the next regular meeting on the following Tuesday because the business of the board would not permit all to be accomplished in one night.

The Crown subdivision has been made a part of the village and as such the village takes over the roads and the maintenance of water lines.

Verkets Move to Hayward, Wis.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Verkets and children moved Sunday, Dec. 27 to Hayward, Wis., where they purchased a grocery store and lunch room.

The store is six miles south of Hayward between Grindstone lake and Court Oreille lake. They plan to make this their permanent residence. They announced they would welcome seeing any of their friends that may get up that way in the future.

The Leo Fox home on the Homer White road near Loon Lake was first place winner in the exterior home Christmas decoration contest conducted by the Moose Lodge and its women's auxiliary.

Frank Kennedy, Jr., chairman of the contest, said that the Fox family used more than 400 lights in outlining their home, and the stub evergreens around it, and displayed a Santa Claus and his sleigh. Large red lighted candles flanked the doorway.

Second place winner went to the Edward Gresens family, 1050 Bishop driv., where a life-size Santa Claus was shown with bundles of gifts at his feet.

A Santa Claus and his reindeer were shown on the front lawn at the Louis Kempf home at Petite lake which won for that family the third prize.

Prizes were hand painted plates with Christmas scenes.

Honorable mention went to the Everett Oftedahl of Naber subdivision; George Bartlett of Victoria st., and C. E. Hennings of Hennings st., whose homes and foliage were well decorated and lighted. They received ribbons which were attached to the doors in acknowledgment.

The Moose organizations were well pleased with the results of their contest and it was said that Antioch was never more beautiful at any Christmas so far as decorations were concerned. Businesses selling exterior lights were sold out early, otherwise the number of decorated homes would have been more.

Restaurants, Taverns Prepare for Big Business on Thursday Night

Antioch is preparing to celebrate the arrival of 1954.

Public events are announced by the Moose Lodge which will have dancing starting at 9 p. m., and the Veterans of Foreign Wars who will also have dancing at their club house at Loon Lake.

Pasadena Garden, the 19th Hole, Smart's Country House, and the B-Z-B tavern have all advertised New Year's Eve parties. The Pasadena Gardens are featuring the Armand Rossi Trio and will have buffet luncheon and favors along with dancing.

The Old Timers Dance Club will have a private party at St. Ignatius' Hall starting at 7 p. m., with a pot-luck supper. Antioch Will Battle Dundee High Saturday Night in Cardinal Gym

Although conference play doesn't begin until next week, Antioch's Sequoits will trek down to Dundee on Saturday night to play the Cardinals of Dundee High, leaders of the Little Seven Conference.

It should prove a battle, for the Cardinals, defeated 76 to 47 by Barrington, at the Broncho court Saturday night, were able to hold the North Suburban champions, the Bronchos, to an overtime game on their own court.

All things considered, Antioch should be able to beat Dundee, but on their own small court the Cardinals are difficult for any team to overcome.

The Sequoits have been idle throughout the holiday and it will be more difficult to get up steam for this non-conference match.

Grant and Wauconda took part in the Libertyville tournament and Wauconda beat Grant in the consolation game 44-41. Arlington beat McHenry for the tournament title.

"Fill 'er Up" Moscow Style.

It isn't likely that you'll ever be driving your car in Moscow. The communists do not welcome visitors from the free world, nor would most Americans want to go there even if it were possible.

But suppose that were the case—and you found yourself running low on gas and were in urgent need of finding a service station.

First of all, you might run entirely out before you could get your tank refilled. For, while Moscow is one of the great cities of the world in point of population, with some 5,000,000 inhabitants, it has only five—yes, five!—so-called service stations.

But suppose you were lucky and reached one of the five stations in time. Smiling attendants wouldn't run out to check your tires, clean your windshield, attend to your battery, or any of the other things we take for granted here in America. Indeed, you'd have to fill your own tank, perhaps with gasoline of very dubious quality, and all the attendant would do would be to take your ration coupons and your rubles.

It isn't at all remarkable that this should be the case in Moscow. For, under communism and the other totalitarian doctrines, there is no competition and no free enterprise. The state owns and bosses practically everything—and you take what is offered or do without.

The American service station, on the other hand, is the product of the most intense kind of competition—just as is everything else connected with the oil industry. And the result is the best products, the best service, and the lowest prices that human ingenuity can achieve.

Economic Highlights

The problem of mental illness has become a very difficult and important one in today's incredibly complex world. It has brought tragedy to great numbers of individuals and families—and, in addition, it entails a tremendous economic waste.

An important discussion of the subject was recently given by Dr. William C. Menninger, one of the world's foremost psychiatrists, in a speech at the annual meeting of the National Association of Food Chains. Dr. Menninger held that "those of us with a sense of social responsibility must accept the job of helping those around us find more satisfaction in their work, in their personal relationships, in their opportunities." It is often possible, he pointed out, to detect maladjustments in their early stages and take helpful action before serious mental sickness sets in.

He cited several typical examples of how mental traits and troubles can seriously damage a business no less than the individual. In one case a $50,000 a year executive cracked, and his conduct jeopardized both his own reputation and that of the standing and business of the company he represented. In another the head of a big manufacturing company became mentally disorganized from worry, took to drinking excessively, and while in this state did great harm to the business and other other people connected with it. A different kind of problem was presented by a man who had done well in managing a store and been promoted to a more important position as a result. He worked extremely hard, yet accomplished less and less. In this instance, Dr. Menninger said, "The man's feeling of inadequacy and insecurity and tenseness resulted in failure because emotionally he couldn't accept this greater responsibility."

Moreover, it is now recognized that many physical ills are mental in their origin. According to Dr. Menninger, "physical pain caused by psychological conflict is responsible for sending approximately 50 per cent of all patients to all doctors." Many causes of stomach and heart trouble stem from emotional tangles. "Accident prone" people and the chronic makers of mistakes are often victims of personality quirks. And mental difficulties account for the socially maladjusted group—the men and women who just can't get along with their associates. Dr. Menninger cited surveys indicating that 70 per cent of all dismissals are the result of social incompetence, as against only 30 per cent from technical incompetence. That proportion could be drastically changed if qualified, intelligent help were given in time.

It is impossible to do justice to Dr. Menninger's speech in a brief summary. But his big point is in this sentence: "I am personally convinced that mental hygiene clinics in businesses and industrial plants would pay big dividends—in dollars and in human happiness—as they did in the mental hygiene units of the basic training camps throughout World War II." In this connection, he added a caution—such clinics, if they are to do a first class job of emotional aid, must be staffed by the best qualified men available.

Dr. Menninger ended by saying, "Mental health, in one sense, is synonymous with happiness, personal and family security, and success in the many varied activities of living. The cultivation of good human relations . . . can and does produce first, an increase in the satisfaction to employees and customers, which is an extremely important responsibility of any business. Second, good human relations will pay off in cold dollars and cents to management. Finally, were we able to apply some of these simple principles effectively many more people would have a chance—not only to make a living—but also to make a life."

SHORT STORY

Farmer Fugitive
By John M. Davis

WHEN Manny Palmer made his second, and successful, break from the State pen, it caused quite a furor in police circles. More so than just a routine break would, because Palmer was nobody's dummy. It had taken the State a lot of time and expense to put the wily forger behind bars.

Though recently promoted, Don Costello was only a cog in the vast, efficient machine searching for the felon—but he considered his role quite important, and he was mad.

For two days, since the break, his senior partner, Riordan, had kept the big prowl car jogging leisurely along the rutted, infrequent roads on the edge of town. Costello had pointed out that common men and forgers were not farmers; that such types usually hid in the center of crowds or the thick of teeming cities. The ranting had done no good.

"Hayseed!" he muttered. "Just a big, dumb hayseed. How you ever got off a beat is more than I'll ever figure out."

Riordan turned slow, patient eyes toward the younger man. "You city kids are all right, I guess," his voice was patronizing, "in your places. The main trouble is, you don't know anything."

For five or ten minutes they banded words, the junior partner getting the tall end of the debate.

At their approach, the farmer stepped out of the poultry house with a bird under his arm.

"You figure this mug will do what the books say," he pointed out. "Don't you figure he's smart enough to think of that, too? My guess is—he'll hide out where he isn't supposed to be."

Costello merely grunted, eyeing a man in the yard ahead with distaste. His trained glance took in the dirty shoes, ill-fitting overalls, work-grimed hands. At their approach, the farmer had stepped into a chicken house, and now came out, a bird nestled in the crook of one arm. He approached the car and with calm courtesy asked if he could be of help. Riordan flashed the circular, and with timeless persistence asked if the man had seen any strangers in the region. The man hadn't, and he and Riordan got into a discussion of chickens, and their feed.

"Hayseeds!" Costello felt a mounting wall of bitterness surge over him. "A couple of hayseeds."

"Now, take Emmy, here," the man was saying, stroking the beady-eyed bird as he talked. "She ain't been laying right for nigh on to a week. Off on her feed, I guess."

"Yeah," said Riordan, "That'll do it sometimes, all right." He reached down and pulled back on the brake, as if to settle down for further discussion. But Riordan didn't settle down.

The policeman's hand brushed the door handle as his burly shoulder smashed outward. The door flipped open, struck the farmer in the mid-section and sent him reeling. For all his size, the detective was out of the door and thundering toward the staggering man, before Costello could unseat himself.

Riordan was on top of him, rolled the inert mass over and pulled a revolver from the baggy trousers. Before the man revived, the big cop had half-dragged him toward the junior partner and dashed for the farmhouse. Inside, as he expected, he found the rightful owner and his wife locked in a closet. In a matter of minutes the easy-going detective had completed his report and returned to the car. The forger slunk in the back seat, rubbing his bruised chin on a hunched shoulder.

"Well," Costello was grudging, "maybe you know what you're doing, after all." He jerked a thumb toward the handcuffed man behind. "But what made you suspicious of this guy in the first place?"

The older officer blinked solemnly, and stared at the youth, a slight grin twitching the corners of his mouth. "You remember that chicken he said was off its feed, not laying?"

Costello nodded, glum but curious.

"Well," said Riordan, enjoying his joke, "that chicken was a rooster."

3-Minute Fiction

Norway Revives Old Tradition of Ship Figureheads

WASHINGTON — A Norwegian shipping lines has revived one of the sea's oldest traditions—placing figureheads on its modern motorships.

In the golden days of sail, a vessel rarely went into service before the ship carvers had bolted her painted wooden figurehead to the stern. Viking ships bore figureheads of hawks, dragons and other animals.

There have been a number of famous figureheads in American history. The best known probably is "Tecumseh," the Naval Academy's "God of 23," to which midshipmen jocularly pray for passing grades. Actually, Tecumseh is a bronze replica of Tamanend, a Delaware Indian figurehead carried by the U.S. S. Delaware. The Delaware burned at Norfolk during the Civil War.

A bust of General Armstrong, from the American warship of that name, rested for many years at Fayal in the Azores, where the Armstrong was sunk during the War of 1812. Still bearing the marks of shot, the bust today is at the U.S. Naval Academy.

An English museum has the likeness of Abraham Lincoln from some long-dead Yankee ship. And in a New Zealand garden is the statue of an Indian chief, believed to be the figurehead from the American square-rigger King Philip, wrecked "down under."

In modern times the plumb bows of steamships held no place for figureheads. In the Norwegian revival, they are cast in metal—less incongruous than wood on a steel hull.

Gunsmith a Success Despite Handicap

ROCHESTER, Pa. — In 1927 a slim, 17-year-old boy by the name of Lowry Smith was crushed against his father's barn by a team of horses. His back was broken.

Despite his handicap, today at 43 he is a nationally-known gunsmith and in 1952 sold rifles and pistols for $200,000.

Smith is a quick-smiling, cheerful fellow who has kept his nimble, skilled fingers busy for sixteen hours a day for the past 16 years. After his accident, Smith spent eight months in a cast. He decided he would build a business out of his hobby of fixing guns. He repaired, remade and traded them at home. In 1934 he opened a small shop. Business began to trickle in.

In 1952 he sold 10,000 guns of all kinds to customers in almost every state and in Canada. He says the "true hunter's desire for personal guns" has made his success possible.

He keeps a stock of 3,000 guns.

Although his gunsmithing keeps him busy, he likes to raise sheep and farm for recreation.

Landbound Shrimp Puzzles Fishermen

WASHINGTON — The desert shrimp is one of the great aquatic oddities in this world. It breathes through its feet, swims upside down, and lives a mere 40 days after a two-year hatching period.

The Apus lives and breeds in stagnant pools which evaporate in summer months and refill in the rainy seasons. Often shrimp eggs will remain dormant for years, awaiting suitable conditions for hatching. Eggs deposited in evaporated ponds are sometimes carried by the wind or on the legs of birds to other waterholes hundreds of miles distant.

Apus was discovered in an English lake in 1850. It did not appear again in the British Isles until 1907, when it turned up in a Scottish millpond. Recently it appeared in a rainwater pond near Panhandle, Texas.

Saved by Fireman, Woman Asks Damages

DANBURY, Conn.—Mrs. Abigail Lee, 80, was recently saved from a fire in Danbury. Later she asked the city to reimburse her for treatment of rib fractures she alleged where suffered when firemen carried her to safety.

She asked payment of $2,343 hospital bill and a doctor's bill, the amount of which was not specified.

Said one councilman, a volunteer fireman: "Mrs. Lee should thank God we have good firemen who could lift her out of the burning building. She's fortunate to be alive."

Antarctica

Antarctica, a frigid land mass, virtually devoid of life, draped with an ice cap hundreds of feet thick and cut off from the rest of the world by icy seas, is being claimed by eight nations. It is as large as Europe and Australia combined. Averaging 6,000 feet, it is higher above the sea than any other continent. In the center is the South Pole, on a plateau 9,800 feet above sea level.

Rob. E. Coddington....

Deputies said that Edwin Runnfeldt, Mr. Coddington's son-in-law, told them that he, his wife, and two children had gone to the Coddington home for Christmas dinner, but that he and Mr. Coddington argued. He said that he and his family then left the Coddington home and that shortly after they reached their home Mrs. Coddington called saying her husband had killed himself.

Mrs. Coddington told police that her husband had been depressed and nervous of late.

Mr. Coddington's death came at a time when he was apparently at the peak of success in his business career. He came to Antioch from Chicago in 1949 and established his hardware store at the intersection of Rtes. 173 and 59. It was such a success that it gained national attention through an article in the Hardware Age this year and was visited by 15 Danish hardware merchants touring the United States.

Started as an experiment, in the expectation of getting summer resort trade, the store developed a trading area of 25 miles for both winter and summer.

When the Danish visitors came both the Danish and American flag flew above the hardware store.

Mr. Coddington was born June 16, 1894 in Lincoln, Ill., and moved to Chicago in 1924. He attended Lincoln College and the University of Chicago. While in Chicago he operated as a building contractor and then served in the Internal Revenue Department up until a short time before he came to Antioch.

Surviving are the widow, Jane, the daughter, Mrs. Edwin T. Runnfeldt of Antioch, two grandchildren, Robert E. and Camilla Ann Runnfeldt, and a sister, Mrs. Marguerite Remby of Evanston.

The funeral service was held at 11:30 a. m. Tuesday at the Strong Funeral Home with the Rev. Howard Benson of the Methodist church officiating. Burial was in Memorial Park cemetery, Evanston.

1953 Was Good....

year, but that costs increased.

Robert Wilton, electrician, said his business was far ahead of last year. George Borovicka of Reeves Drug store said his business was larger than, last year and this was the same story that Herman Holbek, proprietor of the Ben Franklin store told.

These comments could be repeated by their competitors and other merchants up and down Main, Lake and Depot streets.

Several business places changed hands during the past year. The Chevrolet-Oldsmobile, and Ford agencies are in new hands after having been operated many years by former proprietors. Anthony Scully has taken over the Carl Anderson used-car lot.

The Engler jewelry store now is operated by a new proprietor as The Jewel Box, and Zehren's Grill is now the Pantry.

Regal China Co. Fire

During the year Antioch had one of its worst fires in history when the Regal China Co. plant burned, but it is rising again and should be in operation before March 1.

The Gephart Company failed as an industry, but has been resurrected under the name of the Northern Tubing Co.

The village itself has obtained a

Many New Homes Built

Many new homes have been built in Antioch and the boundaries of the village have been enlarged by the annexation of the Crown Realty Co. subdivision between North Avenue and Cross Lake east of Main st. It is expected that this area will be largely populated during the coming year.

Changes have been made in two of the Antioch church pulpits during the past year. Improvements have been made in church buildings.

The Antioch Township High School addition was completed and placed into use and a new addition started for the Antioch Grade school. An effort is being made to provide a Youth Center and a place where teenagers will find something to do.

Not everything in Antioch is as pleasant as people would like it. There were several tragedies and the village lost a number of valuable citizens. Homes have been broken. However, they have drawn a community sympathy.

Rural Antioch prospered along with the village and summer resorts had their best year in history because of favorable weather.
